

- Segmentation subdivides an image into its constituent regions or objects.
- Segmentation stops when objects of interest in an application have been isolated.
- Image segmentation algorithms generally are based on one basic properties of intensity values: discontinuity and similarity.
- Categories:
 - Partition image based on abrupt changes in intensity.
 - Partition image based on similarities according to some predefined criteria.