This definition extends naturally for any number n of random variables, in which case the joint density must be a product of n terms.